

City council to study tougher gun control ordinance

Concerned about a rise in violent crimes, the Seaside City Council has decided to look into the possibility of tightening its firearms control ordinance.

Councilman Oscar Lawson brought the issue to light at last Thursday's meeting of the council, with the reminder of recent shootings within the city, incidents which he said could be reduced if the city had tighter controls over the security of firearms.

"There's been a steady increase in deaths in Seaside," Lawson said. "We shouldn't have to wait until anybody else is killed before we do something. I want to make this whole city safe."

Lawson suggested that the city council look into the possibility of adding a section to its municipal code along the lines of an ordinance in Del Rey Oaks which attaches the following conditions to the sale, display, and storing of firearms:

-The seller must hold a federal firearms permit and meet all provisions of the Gun Control Act of 1968.

The seller must have obtained a permit from the police chief authorizing the storage of firearms for sale within the city. The permit must be renewable annually and is issued upon proof that the seller has the federal firearms permit and has taken measures to insure the safety of his firearms from burglary or theft. The police chief has the power, in conjunction with the building inspector, to require as a condition for the issuance of the permit structural changes to the building in which the firearms are stored.

-The city permit and the federal firearms permit must be displayed in a prominent location at the point of sale of the firearms.

Current Seaside firearms ordinances require the seller to keep the items in a secure facility which meets the approval of the chief of police.

The seller, under existing Seaside ordinances, must hold a yearly permit from the chief of police, but there is no requirement that the seller have the federal firearms control permit, as Lawson suggested.

"I'm saying that if people have guns, they should be responsible for their security," Lawson said. "I'm not saying that people shouldn't have guns."

Lawson said the problems of drugs, prostitution, and burglary with firearms are "interwoven" in Seaside and asked that the city staff study possible means of tightening controls over firearms.

"Many people don't realize how limited we are in our powers," remarked Councilman Joe Cota. "We can pass all the ordinances we want but people can still go over to Monterey and Salinas to get guns."

"This is one of the worst problems we have here in Seaside," agreed Councilman Glenn Olea. "But we can not control weapons coming in from outside."

"We have to do all we can within this city to draw the line as it relates to crime in the community," said Councilman Steve Ross. "The percentage is very low of the number of people who own guns and who also shoot with those same guns."

Ross said a survey of crime activity in Seaside will be conducted soon and those results should assist the city.

In a separate matter, the city council got an earful of complaints from residents about proposed changes in bus stops by the Monterey Peninsula Joint Powers Transportation Agency. Manager Thomas Albert appeared before the council to explain JPA's planned expansion of service in Seaside.

Beginning April 5:

-Buses will be operated in both directions along Hilby, Noche Buena, Broadway, Yosemite, Ord Grove, and Fremont. This will provide transit service for local trips in Seaside for the first time.

-Service will be re-routed to Fort Ord, providing direct service to the base from residential areas of Seaside.

-New bus service will be available along Kimball Avenue to the Yosemite-Hilby area.

-Through service will be initiated between Seaside and Carmel, eliminating the present transfer system.

-Schedules will be coordinated to provide more frequent bus service to major destinations.

Henry Mangus of 1585 Ord Grove, Seaside, told the city council that when he learned recently that a bus stop was to be installed in front of his house he was astonished.

"There's another bus stop just up the hill," he said. "It doesn't make sense to have two bus stops so close together."

Ray Jones, owner of Ray's Department Store, 1281 Fremont, Seaside, said the removal of a bus stop from the block in which his store is situated has hurt business to the tune of $100 a day, and he asked that the bus stop be restored.

"There's quite a bit of business being pulled out of Seaside because of this," Jones said.

And La Verne Hall, owner of La Verne's Wigs and Cosmetics, 1285 Fremont, Seaside, also objected to the removal of the bus stop.

"My business has dropped considerably since the bus stop has been moved," she said. "Most of my customers are women, and they don't drive so well."

Councilman Steve Ross reported that he is in the process of reviewing all facets of the affirmative action plan for the city of Seaside, with a view to possible tightening of its provisions to include the hiring of more unemployed, minority residents of Seaside on projects involving city and federal funds.

His request for lists of employees according to contractors doing business with the city be supplied at his behest, was approved unanimously by the city council. Ross suggested the inquiry into the city's affirmative action program at the prior council meeting after a controversy arose about the city's compliance in the library project, which involves federal funds.

The city council referred to the planning commission a request by Adeline Di Lorenzo for consideration of a previously-approved project with a new conceptual drawing. The architect, Paul E. Davis, asked for conceptual approval by the city council, and will also ask for the same from the planning commission, so that the project can be resubmitted to the coastal commission for reconsideration.

The coastal commission denied the request for a use permit for the proposed 12-unit apartment complex at 1215 Ord Grove, but the architect believes that the redesigned proposal corrects those features which one resident in the area found objectionable. The property would be rezoned from R-3 to R-4, if approved by the planning commission.

The city council also voted unanimously to dip into reserves for some $14,000 to purchase a new ambulance for the fire department. Fire Chief John R. Kayser instructed the council that the ambulance in service now was badly damaged by an accident Feb. 18, and repairs are estimated at $1,200. The unit

Seaside Redevelopment Agency upgrades the whole community

The Seaside Redevelopment Agency has been in the business the last 15 years of remaking and upgrading the community from the ground up.

In those 15 years, between 1960 when the agency was formed and 1975, the assessed valuation of property within the areas under redevelopment has risen by more than 200 per cent.

Substandard housing has been eliminated and replaced by improved lots and structures, or rehabilitated; Seaside has gained the most modern automotive center on the Monterey Peninsula; and the road to economic growth has been paved with dedication and a sense of community pride.

Some figures concerning the rise in assessed valuations tell the story succinctly at the inception of the four ongoing projects of the Redevelopment Agency (Del Monte Heights, Gateway, Hannon, and Laguna Grande), assessed valuations were frozen at the then-current levels. For all four areas, the assessed valuations totaled $5,947,071, and in the current fiscal year, they have reached the level of $13,233,216.

What that all adds up to is an increased tax base for the city, which can then be translated into continued economic growth. The Seaside Redevelopment Agency has accomplished this objective through several approaches:

-The provision of more than $15 million in sewers, storms drains, curbs, gutters and sidewalks; the construction of nine new parks; and the creation of hundreds of new building sites upgraded to conform to city building standards.

-The extension of low-interest loans or grants to families living within redevelopment areas for the rehabilitation or replacement of their homes.

-The construction of Gateway, which has been partially financed through federal funds as well as federal, in order to bring an increased business potential into the city, with increased tax revenues.

"When Seaside was incorporated in 1954, we had unimproved streets, no storm drainage system, or other amenities," said Finn Sutton, the city's Community Development Coordinator and former director of the Redevelopment Agency. "A group of citizens set up the Redevelopment Agency to get federal assistance. The goal was to preserve those houses that could be saved. Other shacks were to be torn down and lots of 6,000 square feet, the standard lot size, were to be created."

In the 15 years during which those objectives were carried out, hundreds of families were relocated and many more were given financial assistance in upgrading and rehabilitating their homes to code standards.

Felix Oramas, relocation officer with the Redevelopment Agency, recalled that many people had to be shown the clear advantages to moving into safer, better quarters before they were willing to move.

"When you talk to senior citizens and tell them what the facts are, they're in favor of it," Oramas said. "When I told them that we could put up to $15,000 down to help them if they couldn't afford to move, that made a difference, too."

Oramas referred to the Agency's ability to make up the difference with federal housing funds between the cost of the old quarters and comparable new living accommodations, according to that family's ability to pay.

Many of the hundreds of Seaside families who reluctantly moved from their old home into new quarters were assisted with federal funds, both in purchasing a new home or in paying higher rent.

CONTESTANTS in the Annual Bike Rodeo held by the Seaside Parks and Recreation Department line up for judging last week. Tracy Brown of Manzanita School won the grand prize, a 10-speed bicycle. Other winners were Roger Reed, Daniel

Registration commences for Ord program

Registration for the Spring II cycle of the Monterey Peninsula College's "On-Post Education Program at Fort Ord" will be held March 17-21.

More than 50 classes will begin March 24.

Pat Mulcahy, coordinator of the program, urged students to register early, since the program is showing rapid growth and is expected to continue growing as 7th Division personnel locate here. Nearly 1,200 students signed up for Spring I cycle classes.

Classes offered cover a wide range of subjects, from art history to sociology. Classes are open to civilians as well as to military personnel.

Mulcahy said students may register March 17-21 between 8 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. in Building 1024. Books will be sold there on March 24 from 3 p.m. to 8 p.m. and on March 25 and 26 from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. After those dates, books will be available only at the MPC Bookstore.

An English Placement Test is required of students enrolling in Art 103, Business 204, English 101 and English 260. Students who need to take the test should contact a counselor in the Fort Ord Education Center.

California residents may take classes without paying a registration fee. New, non-resident servicemen and their dependents do not have to pay a fee for the first 12 months. After 12 months, a $28 per unit fee is charged unless residency has been established. Fees are payable at the time of registration.

Most MPC-Ford Ord classes are held in the evenings, with some offered during afternoon hours. In the future a number of plans which are now under consideration would coordinate class times so they won't conflict with tactics training schedules.

About 20,000 military men and women are expected to be assigned to Fort Ord by 1976, as the post becomes headquarters for the 7th Division. Civilian workers are expected to increase from 2,500 to 3,500. This growth means that the number of potential MPC-Ford Ord students will approximately be doubled.

Keith Merrill, dean of community education, said this growth will bring about new educational options for military personnel and their dependents, as well as for the area's civilian population.

As well as taking MPC classes on post, students can

Entries come in for Marina Day Parade

Entries for the 7th Annual Marina Day Parade have been rolling in this week, said Robert R. Robbins, parade committee chairman.

The Fort Ord Color Guard has announced its intention of marching, as has the 7th Infantry Division Band, the Hi-Steppers Junior Majorette Corps of Salinas, the color guard of VFW Post 6849, Spreckels and the 1974-1975 "Castroville World" Artichoke Queen, Miss Patricia Ross.

Also accepting invitations were Linda Klein and Sue McCarthy of Sonoma, riding a pair of matched horses, and J.W. Werling of Redwood City, driving his restored 1937 Willis Coupe. Werling placed first in the 1974 Pacific Grove Winter Parade.

Attendance at this year's parade is expected to exceed last year's record turnout and the number of entries is expected to top 150.

This year's parade theme is "Liberty." The theme is in keeping with the growing list of activities leading up to the Bi-Centennial celebration in 1976.

Following the parade there will be a carnival with food and beverage stands, live entertainment and a barbecue behind the reviewing stand on Vista Del Camino.

There will be many trophies as well as cash awards presented to the various divisions of participants of the parade.

The parade is sponsored by the Marina Chamber of Commerce and Monterey Cypress Post 694. The American Legion in Marina.

Any organization wishing to participate in the celebration can contact the parade committee at P.O. Box 87, Marina, Calif. 93933.

Seaside woman honored for service

Mrs. Verna Sloan of Seaside was honored as a "Woman of Distinction" recently by the Sierra Nevada Region of International Toastmistress Clubs, at the San Jose Center for Performing Arts.

This international organization honored women of distinction, in recognition of International Women's Year, Fort Ord. She set the pace for outstanding achievements in their areas of speciality, and for services rendered in their particular communities.

Mrs. Sloan was honored for outstanding achievements in the area of affirmative action for minorities and women.

She is a Department of Defense civilian employ at Fort Ord. She set the pace for women as the first woman official in EEO named by the Department of Defense on the Monterey Peninsula.

As a staff member of the EEO office at Fort Ord, she participates in Upward Mobility Training, sets goals and objectives for minorities and women and follows their progress, advises the commander and management officials on special concerns of minorities and women, and handles discrimination complaints based on race, national origin, religion, sex, or age.

In the community, she is a member of the Executive Committee of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, chairperson for the Monterey County Affirmative Action Volunteer Council; director of Religious Education, Hays Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, a charter member and past executive of Fort Ord's Business and Professional Women's Club, who recently named her Woman of Achievement for 1974-1975.

The Sandpiper's Toastmistress Club of Fort Ord nominated her for the honor of Woman of Distinction even though she is not a member. She had joined the Orator's Toastmasters' Club at Fort Ord about two weeks prior to this honor. She says she joined the previously all male group to further integrate it; the group now claims two female members. She feels it important to change the attitudes of males toward the integration of talent and ability, without regard to sex.

Mrs. Sloan achieved her educational goals by attending schools in the evening while holding down a job, and fulfilling the role of housewife and mother. She earned the Associate of Arts degree in Business Education from Monterey Peninsula College, the Bachelor of Arts degree in Management from Golden Gate University, and is currently working toward a Master's Degree in Business Administration at Golden Gate University.

She has worked in the EEO office for 10 months. Prior to that time she was a supervisory accountant in the Comptroller Directorate. In addition to her supervisory duties she volunteered her services as an Equal Employment Opportunity Counselor to the Ford Ord civilian workforce for five years.

Rebuilding Seaside, ground upwards

In addition, they were given moving allowances to cover the cost of their move or the mover's bill.

In the Noche Buena project, the first undertaken by the Redevelopment Agency, a total of 58 families were relocated between 1954 and 1958. The 66-acre Noche Buena project was one of the first three redevelopments projects to be completed in the West. The federal government contributed $937,028 in the form of cash advances, services and public improvements. The city's contribution has been more than repaid through increased assessed valuation, which has increased tax revenue.

Del Monte Heights project was the second one undertaken, and 55 families were relocated from that area, including 18 individuals and a handful of businesses. The federal government contributed $3.6 million, and the local contribution was $2.1 million, in the form of public improvements.

The Hannon project was the greatest redevelopment project in the city of Seaside in terms of human impact. A total of 211 families, 89 individuals, and 13 businesses were relocated in the third project. Hannon involved 143 acres of high-density residential area and was completed in 1972. The federal government's contribution to the project amounted to $5.2

million, and Seaside contributed $1.8 million, mostly in the form of public facilities.

Gateway project, the fourth redevelopment project, involved the relocation of 175 families, 108 individuals, and 84 businesses on 72 acres of land. All the major parcels in that commercial project have been sold to auto dealers, primarily. The federal government's contribution was $4.8 million, and Seaside contributed $1.4 million, in public facilities, site preparation, malls, plazas, sewerage, and drainage facilities.

Thirty-three families and seven businesses have been relocated in the Laguna Grande project, the fifth undertaken in Seaside. The project involves 165 acres, divided into three districts: visitor commercial, convention center, and residential.

"The idea," Sutton said with no exaggeration, "was to upgrade an entire community."

Last week, the last of the wrecked autos that have lain in junkyards along Del Monte Boulevard for years were removed in the final stages of the Laguna Grande project. The land, once cleared, will be improved with an extended drainage canal, and its future development might entail open space or parks use.

Sutton sees even more flexibility in redevelopment coming to Seaside because of a shift in federal funding methods. Instead of the city of Seaside applying directly for funds used for redevelopment and a host of other community development functions to various federal agencies, block grants for community development will come to the city, to be used as the city council and city staff deem best.

Seaside's entitlement under this new system of block grant funding next year is some $1.6 million, and Sutton and other city officials are now in the process of designing programs for community development tailored to the community. A community, door-to-door pool to assess needs will be one aspect to the designing of this program.

One aspect of the community development program already anticipated is that $225,000 will be available in its first years of operation for low-interest loans to families desiring to rehabilitate their homes. Sutton said.

Harold Camacho, director of the Redevelopment Agency, noted that the life of the 3 per cent loans granted under the old system through the Department of Housing and Urban Development was 29 years. The maximum amount of such loans has been $17,400, and the average amount of the rehabilitation loans was $3,390.

A total of 225 such loans were made in Del Monte Heights, Hannon, and Laguna Grande projects, amounting to $627,400 since 1967 when the loan program started.

These loans were made through the auspices of, and with the assistance of, the Redevelopment Agency. Rehabilitation counselors visited the homes for an inspection, made recommendations about necessary work, and the agency did the paper work to secure the loans.

"We've had people calling us to ask for loans, instead of us going to them," Camacho observed. "We also had a self-help program whereby a person who could do the rehabilitation work himself could get a loan just to cover the cost of the materials."

Under a provision of federal law for the release of grants to low-income families who qualify for funds to rehabilitate their homes, 141 outright grants were made for that purpose since 1965, for a total of $213,435.

'Messiah' to be presented Sunday in Seaside

The Monterey Peninsula Choral Society under the direction of Haymo Taeuber, will present Handel's Messiah, accompanied by the Monterey County Little Symphony Orchestra at St. Francis Xavier Church, 1475 La Salle Ave. at 3 p.m. Sunday, March 16.

Handel's great oratorio which is a favorite with all audiences is a fitting performance for the Lenten period, based as it is on Biblical selections of prophecy, the story of the birth, crucifixion and teachings of Jesus. Handel began work on the score on August 22, 1741 and the inspiration which possessed him kept him constantly writing and working at such intensity that 23 days later he had finished the 265 pages of the score and the instrumentation. The opportunity to hear this masterpiece well-performed is an uplift to the spirit.

Soloists for the oratorio are Gwen Curatilo, soprano, heard recently with the Choral Society in the Christmas concerts at Carmel Mission. John Miller, bass, whose performance in Haydn's Creation with the Choral Society last year was hailed as "masterful and poetic." Glenna De Weese, contralto and James Hull, tenor, are well known locally, having performed with the Choral Society many times.

Miss Curatilo sang for six seasons with the San Francisco Opera Company and was for five years permanent soloist with San Francisco's renowned Bach to Mozart Group. She has been featured soloist for the Inverness Festival, and she teaches as opera director as well as voice and diction instructor both at the Dominican College in San Rafael and Chico State University.

John Miller performed with San Francisco Opera Company for two seasons, and has been featured as soloist with the Oakland Symphony and the William Hall Chorale in Los Angeles. He has also been the soloist at Grace Cathedral in San Francisco.

Tickets at $3 for the afternoon performance at St. Francis Xavier which seats 1,000, are available at the various symphony outlets, Abinante's Music, Monterey; Lily Walker Records and Music, Pacific Grove; Carmel Music, Carmel; Ord Terrace Pharmacy, Seaside; Recreation Offices on military posts; the Symphony Office, Sunset Center, Carmel, and may be purchased at St. Francis Xavier Church one hour before the performance.

Tickets for full time students and for children are $1 for the St. Francis Xavier hall.

New art show at city hall

A collection of paintings by Carmel artist Helen Oehler adorns the Seaside city hall gallery during the month of March.

They are richly-colored works evoking the hues of landscapes, seascapes, and the thousand shades and textures of the earth. Some of the most arresting paintings in the collection are the portraits, especially the poignant "Troubadour."

Helen Oehler is a graduate of the Chicago Art Institute and studied in the New York and Cape Cod studios of George Elmer Browne. She was also on the summer and Saturday faculties of the Chicago Art Institute. Helen Oehler supervised art in the schools at Dixon, Ill. and taught the history of ancient art in Evanston, Ill.

Her works have been exhibited at private studios in Cleveland, Ohio; Ridgewood and Saddle River, N.J.; Mill Valley and in Carmel, Calif.

She is a member of and has exhibited with the American Artists Professional League, the American Watercolor Society, Allied Artists of America, Audubon Artists, New Jersey Watercolor Society, Painters and Sculptors Society of New Jersey, Ridgewood Art Association, the National League of American Penwomen, Asbury Park Society of Fine Arts, and the Society of Western Artists.

Addiss and Crofut to perform

Addiss and Crofut, known as Explorers in Song, will be presented as the final concert in the series presented by the Monterey Peninsula Concert Association at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 15, at the Pacific Grove Junior High School Auditorium.

Addiss and Crofut became friends in high school days when one played oboe and the other French horn. Addiss majored in music at Harvard under Walter Piston, and after graduate study in New York with John Cage, became a teacher and writer for Musical America Magazine.

Crofut majored in music at Allegheny College, where a concert by Pete Seeger attracted him to the banjo. Drafted, he served in Korea entertaining troops and later at the invitation of Japan's Prince Mikasa organized adult music recreation programs all over Japan. As a result he won a State Department Cultural Affairs grant to tour Southeast Asia. Addiss joined him in Hong Kong and the partnership was born.

Their instruments range from guitar to piano and harpsichord, and from five string banjo to Asian Tranh to African thumb piano. The repertoire combines a knowledge of American blues and folk idiom with songs from Old World sources in Europe and fellow musicians in Asia and Africa. They have insisted upon the principle that music has to be learned country by country to reflect the quality of the people it belongs to.

The late Senator Robert F. Kennedy and jazz musician Dave Brubeck have each paid glowing tribute to them. On television, Addiss and Crofut have been featured numerous times on both the Johnny Carson and the Today Show, as well as a special for CBS Camera 3, and on the Walter Cronkite evening news.

They have several recordings employing a variety of musical concepts and instruments, but in their concerts they still resist writing a program, wanting the freedom to keep changing and responding to what moves them at the time.

The Concert Association is presently conducting its membership drive. New members for the next season of five concerts will be admitted to this concert.

Cost is $10 for adults and $5 for children through high school. Memberships may be purchased the night of the concert. For further information, call 375-3544.

Symposium highlights problems of dying

A Symposium on death and dying will be held at the Outrigger Restaurant on Cannery Row from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday, March 15.

Sooner or later everyone approaches death and it need not be a fearful experience. People can die with dignity. They can help themselves, and others, during this period by understanding the process of dying and the attitudes about death that are prevalent in this society.

Principal speaker for the symposium is Sidney Messer who has written a thesis on thanatology, the art of dying. Messer is disaster and medical coordinator for Los Angeles County; a fellow of the American Geriatric Society and the Chairman of the ad hoc Committee for prevention of military disaster in Los Angeles County.

Chairman of the symposium is Lewis S. Keizer, director of the School of Humanities of the Academy of Arts and Humanities in Seaside.

Other speakers include: The Rev. Charles L. Moore who will speak on "The Spiritual Side of Death and Dying;" Archbishop H. Adrian Spruit, Primate of the Church of Antioch, who will discuss the process of dying as found in the Tibetan Book of the Dead; and Harry E. Rogers, a Monterey attorney, who will discuss the legalities of death.

The fee for the symposium is $10 and includes an Outrigger buffet luncheon. Academic credit for the symposium is available through the Academy of Arts and Humanities for an additional fee of $34.

Sponsors of the Symposium are: Sophia Divinity School; Ashram West; The Academy of Arts and Humanities; The Church of Antioch and "The Singletons."

More information about the Symposium on Death and Dying may be obtained by calling the Church of Antioch 373-7120; the Academy of Arts and Humanities 394-3611 or the Singletons 373-4166.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING Re: Monterey Peninsula Transit Improvement Project FY 75

Q. When I was cleaning our attic yesterday, I got the fright of my life! I discovered two negotiable securities under a pile of newspapers, which I thought I had put in my safe deposit box in the bank. My husband says there was no need to worry as our home-owners insurance policy covers cash and securities that get stolen or destroyed in a fire. Were they covered?

A. Yes, but only up to the limits specified in your policy. These are designed to provide as much protection as the average family generally needs, but if you have a lot more cash or securities other than most people, talk to your insurance representative about getting more protection.

Securities are not really "like money in the bank" unless they are as safe from fire and theft as money in the bank.

was purchased in 1963, and when new did not have the capability for safe, high-speed travel deemed necessary. Kayser suggested that the city look into purchasing a new, better-equipped ambulance.

The ambulance now has 65,000 miles on it, and it cost about $11,000 when new. It was purchased with contributions raised by the Philippine-American club of Seaside, and was intended to assist those low-income persons who could ill afford the services of a commercial ambulance company, such as A-1 Ambulance. While the city's ambulance was out of service, ambulance assistance was available to Seaside through A-1. Kayser pointed out.

The city council also took under consideration a request for financial assistance form the Seaside Homeowners' Association, presented by Mrs. Edith Gist. The group is asking for onetime aid of $6,280 from the city, and expects to be able to provide $2,090 in its volunteer services. After the first year, Mrs. Gist said, the funds will be raised from the community.

Requests for financial assistance will be considered by the city council in drawing up the budget for the 1975-76 fiscal year.

LAW IN ACTION

AID TO NONPUBLIC SCHOOLS

Recently the U.S. Supreme Court struck down a state law which gave all students a small sum for purchase of textbooks. The purpose of this law was to improve the quality of teaching material. The Court ruled that this was an indirect aid to sectarian schools. A violation of the first amendment. The government "shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion."

Any government aid to religious functions is suspect. It tends to encourage religion. Therefore, tuition grants to students for use in private religious schools are not proper. This is true about tax credits for parents of private school students. They are not eligible for a tuition grant. The purpose of the grants or credits is secular—a direct aid to religious schools.

The government must adhere to a principle of strict neutrality when dealing with religion. It cannot confer a benefit or impose a burden. It cannot insist that students go only to public schools. Parents have the right to educate their children in religious ideas. Nor can the state require a particular kind or quantity of education that may clash with a genuine religious principle.

What about paying for the transportation of children to both public and private religious schools? The Supreme Court said that was all right. It is no different from furnishing police and fire protection to private religious schools. The state may properly give charities and religious schools property tax exemptions. It is proper to allow public schools to dismiss their students early to allow them to attend private instruction—including religious instruction on school property. School lunch programs, driver education programs, or federal aid to school libraries do not confer any special benefit to public schools, but benefit all children.

Perhaps the most controversial subjects are reading the bible as a religious exercise (not as literature) and saluting the flag in public. Both have been held to offend the first amendment. Bible reading is the "establishment of religion"; flag saluting violates the "free exercise of religion." It imposes a political expression of belief.

Dictorow and Fields to perform in Carmel's Sunset Center

Violinist Glenn Dictorow and pianist James Fields will present a concert at 8 p.m., March 21, at Carmel's Sunset Center Theatre.

The young California-born musicians are being presented by the Carmel Music Society as part of the Society's Young California Artist program.

Friends since childhood, Dictorow and Fields have fused their talents and play together regularly. Their varied concerts often include chamber music for violin and piano and solo works which highlight their individual artistry.

Glenn Dictorow made his debut with the Los Angeles Philharmonic when he was 11. Since that time he has won top awards at prestigious international competitions, and has become a virtuoso performer who appears with many of the country's leading orchestras.

In 1972, at age 23, he joined the Philharmonic as associate concertmaster. In addition to his appearances with the Los Angeles Philharmonic under Zubin Mehta and others, Dictorow has fulfilled successful solo engagements with the New York Philharmonic, San Francisco Symphony, Indianapolis Symphony, Seattle Symphony, and New Jersey Symphony, under such conductors as Josef Krips, Arthur Fiedler, Milton Katims, Andre Kostalant, and Henry Lewis.

Dictorow has been heard coast-to-coast in solo recitals and has also presented master classes on various university campuses. Among the numerous awards he has received are the Young Musicians Foundation Grant, Los Angeles; the Kimber and Julia Klumpkey awards, San Francisco; the Merriweather Post Competition, Washington, D.C.; the Coleman Chamber Music Award, Los Angeles (twice); and in 1970 he was the only American violinist among the top laureates in Moscow's International Tchaikovsky Competition.

Dictorow has recently recorded two pieces by Wieniawski - Scherzo-Tarantelle and Polonaise with Zubin Mehta and the Los Angeles Philharmonic for Decca-London Records.

As a winner of the coveted Leventritt International Piano Competition in 1971, James Fields, at the age of 26, has distinguished himself as one of the foremost pianists and musicians in the concert world today.

In 1971, Fields completed five years as an artist student of master pianists Rudolf Serkin and Mieczyslaw Horowitz at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

At the age of 10, Fields made his orchestral debut with the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, and since that time has appeared as soloist with that orchestra on numerous occasions both during the winter season as well as at the Hollywood Bowl.

Fields has played extensively throughout North America, Europe, Central and South America, and as soloist with orchestra has performed with many of the world's great orchestras, including Los Angeles Philharmonic, San Francisco Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra, Pittsburgh Symphony, the Cleveland Orchestra and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Fields has been awarded many honors, including the Debut Grant of the Young Musicians Foundation 1965 National Competition, and First Prize of the 1971 Oakland Symphony Competition.

The Carmel Music Society is the oldest non-profit musical organization on the Monterey Peninsula, now in its 48th season.

A limited number of single tickets are available for the Dictorow-Fields performance. For more information call 624-2085 Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

Students operate television

"This is KCOV with the morning news," are the words that greet a visitor to Covell Elementary School in Seaside on its own closed circuit television program on Fridays from 10 a.m. to 10:15 a.m. each week.

The student-produced show is televised to all students in their classrooms via the closed circuit system installed in the school on a pilot basis. The program includes a serial about a third grade truant who learns better ways through friends, school and community help.

Other subjects covered are an electricity demonstration series, poetry corner, and safety tips. Many of the programs are filmed on video tape during the week, and are then interspersed with portions of live broadcasts.

The project capitalizes on students' attraction to the television medium, which for most students occupies a great deal of their time away from school. Students are learning, and applying basic communication skills in writing, reading, speech, research in a way that involves them. Visitors are welcome, and are asked to call Principal Bill Bryant for a mutually convenient time to observe this new approach to applying old skills at Covell.

In addition to telecasts within the school, plans are to use television in many more ways: sharing of pilot or exemplary programs from within or from outside the district, inservice to the school staff, telecasting of films of exceptional quality or in great demand to allow greater distribution to more children, and the continued use of educational television programs.

The district Instructional Materials Center is beginning a limited collection of video tapes of programs and films which are or could be in frequent need or demand. This, coupled with the potential of originating television programs from the Monterey County Office of Education to be carried on local TV cable systems, might greatly expand the educational use of a powerful medium which education has only begun to tap.
